✦ NOVEMBER REMEMBERING OUR BELOVED DEAD ✦

There is certain sadness about the autumn. It is the season of letting go. The trees, so resplendent in those early days of summer, have faded now and in these weeks will shed their leaves and face the winter stripped of all their vanity. The flowers, which shared their colour and their mixed perfumes, have withered and the rose bushes have been pruned and offer nothing.

It is appropriate that into the month of November we place our remembrance and prayers for the dead. It is the month of the churchyard and the cemetery where we remember those who flourished in our lives and whose names are carved in sentences as short as life itself. They had the springtime of their youth when life was all promise waiting for adventure. The summer of their days was in founding their own families in days which saw the smile and the tear and then before they realised it the nip of autumn and old age was upon them with all its limitations. Then sadly, like the trees, they let go of life for their season had ended.
